

Alexandros Logothetis was born in Athens, Greece in December 1970.

Graduated with Honours from the National Theater of Greece Drama School in 1991 and obtained an MA in Acting from the Arts Educational Schools London in 1998.

Alexandros has been working in the performance industry for more than 27 years.

His work on television gave him popularity early on in his career and shows like "Women", "Anatomy of a Crime", "Stand by me", "The Sacrifice" and "Ten" gave him the opportunity to show his acting abilities on the small screen. In 2010, he starred in Victoria Hislop's international best seller "The Island", portraying Dr. Kyritsis, a role that improved, even more, his vast popularity and gained him many accolades.

On the big screen, he has worked in more than 30 films and has been awarded twice at the Thessaloniki International Film Festival for his work on the films "Business in Balkans" (Best Actor) and "Totally Married" (Best Supporting Actor).

In the theatre, Alexandros has worked with some of the most influential directors in Greece, as Stathis Livathinos, George Michailidis, Nikos Mastorakis, Stamatis Fasoulis, Io Voulgaraki, Cezaris Grauzinis.